Sharing your medical information

Background

For a number of years, work has been ongoing to improve the way that medical records are made available to treating clinicians. Our main computer system is called EMIS Web, which has the ability to enable information to be shared between certain health professionals.

EMIS data sharing enables us, with your consent, to share your medical records with those in the NHS who are involved in your care. EMIS has been designed to enhance patient care.

We will automatically 'opt you in' to the scheme.

NHS staff can only access shared information if they are involved in your care and being an electronic service an audit log is maintained showing when and who has accessed medical records.

EMIS sharing should not be confused with care.data. EDSM only allows those treating you to access medical records. It does not enable your records to be used for research or other purposes.

We already share records of children for child protection reasons and patients who are under the care of the District Nursing Team. This helps clinicians to make decisions based upon a wider knowledge of you and also helps to reduce the number of times that you or your family members are asked the same question. In short it assists clinicians to provide more 'joined up care'.

If I agreed, who could see my records?

It will allow clinicians treating you, who have access to a system which is party to a data sharing agreement with your practice, to view and in some cases update your medical records. This includes Other GP Surgeries, Walk-In-Centres, many departments at local hospitals (including A&E) and community services, such as the District Nursing Team. It could also be in any part of the country. It is anticipated that over time more health services around the country will be able to benefit from this kind of data sharing.

Clinicians outside of your own surgery who wish to access your medical records will ask for your permission to do so. They will have appropriate access levels and will also need to have been issued with a NHS Smartcard. This is a 'chip and pin' card -similar to a bank card.

Can I 'opt out' pick and choose who sees my record?

Yes, you can. You can ask your practice to opt you out of data sharing. If you decide to allow data sharing for the purpose of your care then you need do nothing. This is your agreement that records maintained by your GP can be seen, subject to your authority at the time, by clinicians working outside of the surgery.

However, as the treating clinician needs to ask your permission to see the records at the beginning of each period of care you are in control of who can see your medical information.

For example the diagram below shows that the patient has agreed to share his medical records with the District Nurse and the surgery. However, whilst he is happy for his GP to see notes made by the local smoking cessation adviser he doesn't want the adviser to have access to his other medical records.

Sharing has been designed to enhance patient care we will automatically 'opt you in' to the scheme.

If you prefer not to be then please mention it to a member of the reception team. You are free to change your mind at any time.

I can see the benefits of the other people treating me seeing my notes, but what if there is a matter that I want to stay just between me and my doctor?

You can ask for any consultation to be marked as private, this means that viewing is restricted to the surgery, but allows the rest of the record to be viewed by whoever else is treating you. It is your responsibility to ask for a consultation to be marked as private.

Haven't I agreed/disagreed to do this before?

EMIS sharing may seem very similar to patients as the Summary Care Record which went live some years ago. The Summary Care Record contains only a very small part of your record that is available to be seen by clinicians who might be treating you in A+E departments, Walk In Centres or if you register temporarily somewhere else within the UK.

The Summary Care Record allows other NHS Services to see your current medications and the drugs that you are allergic or sensitive to. Your Summary Care Record can be enriched by your GP to include information that it is important to pass on in the case of an emergency.

Can I change my mind?

Yes, you can always change your mind and amend who you consent to see your records. For instance you can decline to share your records out from the surgery, but if you built up a relationship with the physiotherapist who was treating you and they asked you if they could look at an x-ray report, you could give your consent at that point for them to view your records. You will be referred back to us to change your preference, so the physio treating won't be able to see your records instantly, but should be able to by the next time of your next appointment.

If I decline—what happens in an emergency?

In the event of a medical emergency, for instance if you were taken unconscious to A+E, and the clinician treating you feels it is important to be able to see your medical records he is able to override any consents set.

However, the doctor has to give a written reason for doing so. Where this happens an audit is undertaken by the local Caldicott Guardian (the person with overall responsibility for Data Protection compliance).

Can anyone else see my medical records?

On a daily basis, we get requests from Insurance Companies to either have copies of medical records or excerpts from patients' medical records. This requires your signed consent as it has not been requested to treat/care for you.

Occasionally we are asked for information from the medical records for legal reasons, again this has to be done with your written consent, or in very exceptional circumstances, by court order.

Any questions?

If you have any questions, please speak to reception. If necessary the receptionist will arrange for someone to give you a call.
